Business and colleges celebrate recognition

A local business and college has been recognised at a prestigious national award ceremony in recognition of their partnership working which has helped the company develop and grow.

Dumfries and Galloway Housing Partnership in Dumfries and Dumfries and Galloway College was highly commended for the Sustained Relationship category at the 'Business to College Awards' held on Wednesday night (24 March) at Dynamic Earth in Edinburgh.

DGHP is the largest Registered Social Landlord in rural Dumfries and Galloway.

Fuelled by the desire to create employment opportunities for those within their local tenancy areas, and the wider community, DGHP turned to Dumfries and Galloway College for bespoke training programmes in pre-employment construction.

Since 2006, Dumfries and Galloway College offers almost a dozen bespoke Pre-employment Training Programmes in partnership with DGHP.

Ursula Notman, Wider Role Co-ordinator of DGHP, said:

"At DGHP, we believe we can improve the quality of life for our tenants by equipping them with construction and transferable skills that lead to progressive qualifications and employment through our investment and regeneration works in the region.

"Dumfries and Galloway College and DGHP, with the help and support of our other partners and agencies, have worked tirelessly on creating programmes that meet both the individual, community and labour market needs at a local community level.

"We, at DGHP, look forward to continuing our successful and dynamic relationship with the College, and, for our partners to continue to build on these achievements."

The 'Business to College Awards', sponsored by the Scottish Funding Council and organised by Scotland's Colleges, is part of the Scotland's Colleges Mean Business campaign which aims to raise awareness of the support available to businesses from Scotland's network of 43 further education colleges. This year, colleges have been encouraged to take part in a week-long campaign – dedicated to highlighting the college sector's expertise, experience and facilities which are available to businesses – by staging events on campus, aimed at engaging with the local businesses community.

Now in their second year, both the campaign and awards bring together Scotland's leading business and skills organisations – the Scottish Chamber of Commerce, the Federation of Small Businesses Scotland, Scottish Enterprise, Alliance of Sector

Skills Councils, Business Gateway, CBI Scotland, Skills Development Scotland, Scottish Qualifications Authority and Highlands and Islands Enterprise - to support the initiative.

Attending the awards, Keith Brown, Minister for Skills and Lifelong Learning, said: "These awards are a great way of acknowledging the huge contribution colleges make in supporting the business community, helping to secure Scotland's economic recovery and our future prosperity.

"As a Government we have always acknowledged the way colleges have stepped up to the mark and continued to deliver for learners in Scotland. In recent times, just as the demand for college places has risen, so too have colleges themselves risen to the challenge of meeting that demand.

"Too often in previous recessions, the damage to young people has lasted a generation, and sometimes a whole lifetime. We are working hand in hand with Scotland's colleges and businesses to make sure we do not repeat the mistakes of the past."

Ray Harris, Chief Executive Scotland's Colleges, said: "The Business to Colleges Awards is a great opportunity to celebrate the creative and innovative ways in which colleges and businesses are working together. Scotland's colleges provide real value and benefits to the businesses they engage with. With a practical 'can-do' approach to solving the challenges of the businesses that operate in a modern thriving economy, they contribute a great deal towards Scotland's economy.

"The constant investment in the skills of college staff, as well as the development of many state of the art training facilities, ensures that our colleges continue to meet the demands of all the businesses they engage with."

Joe Mooney, Chair of Scotland's Colleges Knowledge Action Group and Principal, Reid Kerr College, said: "The awards highlight the flexible, local solution colleges are able to offer to businesses. They also underline the amount of work they do across Scotland in supporting businesses – identifying and implementing solutions to tailor-fit the company's requirements – which ultimately lead to a real step change in performance and profit.

"Colleges offer a wide range of expertise and experience and the campaign and awards are designed to encourage companies, no matter what sector or size, to contact their local college and discuss the services on offer."

Scotland's College's Mean Business is part of the wider knowledge transfer and employer engagement agendas for both higher and further education.

Independent research published in November 2007 showed that as a network, Scotland's colleges are in regular contact with more than 10,000 businesses and are providing support services worth almost £40million.

The Scottish Funding Council is responsible for allocating £1.7 billion of public funds each year to colleges and universities in support of Scottish Government priorities. The Council's funding contributes towards the costs of learning and teaching, skills development, research, innovation and other costs such as staff, buildings and equipment in Scotland's 20 universities and higher education institutions (HEIs) and 43 further education (FE) colleges. The £14 million funding SFC provided for knowledge transfer and developing employer engagement was announced in circular SFC/30/2007.
